CONFERENCE PRESENTATION AND OBJECTIVES

The well-known phenomenon of an aging population will, as all the population projections have announced, increase markedly in Spain. This fact, coupled with the need to adjust the supply of services to the wishes of their potential recipients, makes it necessary for public authorities, service providers and society as a whole, to get to know the different solutions and international trends in this field, and to compare them with ours.

When designing the content of this Conference we have tried to start out from a key objective: To provide a space for meeting and reflection in which to display a variety of experiences from outside and within Spain, related to residential care design and models that are being proposed internationally, as suitable to offer to people who need support due to their dependency - quality care without compromising principles such as personal autonomy and which are also affordable.

The results of surveys and qualitative studies on the wishes and expectations of citizens, regarding where they would like to receive care and attention in case they need them, are well known and recurrent: home, their own environment and, failing that, a place (home, flats or housing with services) where they do not have the feeling of their lives being controlled.

By holding this Meeting, we hope to contribute to the debate opened for some years in most countries in our sphere of influence, and which has also begun to be discussed in Spain, regarding architectural designs and care models that might be able to respond to issues such as:

- How to make principles of dignity, autonomy and rights viable, when people live in long stay accommodation, due to their need to receive support and permanent care?
- What architectural and design criteria are required to provide environments that support the control of space and one's own life?
- Can "home" accommodation costs, where quality care, is ensured, be assumed?
- How to advance in the person-centered care model, based on existing equipment?

CONFERENCE RECIPIENTS

Given that the Conference participants come from diverse backgrounds, both territorial and cultural, as well as the focus of the papers having a multidisciplinary scope, the debate within the Conference will also be enriched if it is attended by various agents involved in this field of reflection:

- Associative movement of the elderly
- Associative movement of the persons with disabilities
- Those in charge of public policy
- Planners, managers and service providers
- Experts in social and housing policies
- Social and health professionals
- Third sector Organizations
- Construction companies
